Did Not Touch Bottom.
Nathaniel Palmer of Bath, Me., owner of the big four masted schooner Frank A. Palmer was in town yesterday and remained over night. "The report that the vessel grounded yesterday," said Mr. Palmer, "is an error. The captain hoisted too much sail and the vessel was going at such a rate of speed that he became frightened, and fearing that the turn could not be made in safety he dropped an anchor. This rounded the schooner to and bothered the tug boat captain considerably. The vessel did not touch bottom however and was taken outside all right."

Mr. and Mrs. Ames Have Narrow Escape From Death.

Prompt Work of Engineer McCarthy Saves Lives of the Aged Couple.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Ames, an aged couple employed in the stitching room at the Portsmouth Shoe factory, came very near meeting with death in a most horrible manner, shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon.
They finished their work and left the shop in a top covered sleigh for their home on Maplewood avenue. The sleigh is a small, old-fashioned affair and has a top and sides on it which makes it almost impossible to see any thing going on excepting straight ahead. They drove under the Creek bridge and in crossing the Concord track were struck by engine No 722, in charge of Engineer McCarthy and Fireman Foster. At the time of the accident the engine was moving very slowly or the occupants of the sleigh would most surely have been killed. As it was one of the cylinders on the engine struck the rear end of the sleigh and turned it completely over.

Mr. and Mrs. Ames were thrown out and the horse started to run away, but was stopped before going very far. Engineer McCarthy, being on the right side of the engine, did not see the horse coming until he was half way across the track. Then he quickly reversed the lever and applied the brakes, but too late to wholly avert the accident, although it is doubtful whether the engine from striking the sleigh in a more dangerous manner.
The engineer quickly ran to the aged couple's assistance and was very much relieved to see that they could rise to their feet unaided. They were taken into Wm. Slade's store and the police and a doctor telephoned to. Their services were not needed, however, for beyond a little shaking up and a few bruises, they both suffered but little from the accident. It is true that they were badly frightened, but with a little assistance were able to enter a sleigh and were driven to their home at Christian Shore.

It cannot be said that any one was really to blame for the accident. Flagman Marden was just returning from setting the switch lights, but had not quite reached the crossing when the sleigh was struck. Engineer McCarthy is also a very careful driver and in all his experience in the cab this is his first accident.

SLEIGHING CARNIVAL SOON
Owners of Fast Horses and Fancy Turnouts Getting Ready

So eager were the owners of local fast horses and fancy sleighing turnouts to make a display on the new snow Wednesday, that many of the regular habitués were out before the storm had fairly let up.

The footing was not, of course in shape for speeding, but the number out yesterday afternoon was sufficient to put the racing streets in good condition for fun today.

With the clear, cold weather today, such as the weather bureau promised, the scene on the streets this afternoon will present a carnival of roadsters such as has not been equalled here for a long time.

The footing of today has been of just the right shape to delight all the owners of the fast brigade. No city of its size in New England can produce a faster class of horses or a greater variety of handsome turnouts, than Portsmouth.

The annual hunting to be seen here when the conditions are favorable is one of the features of the winter.

Get out your rig and fall into line.

She Will Bring Full Cargo
The captain of the schooner Frank A. Palmer, (the largest in the world) remarked when about to leave this port that he would load her to her fullest capacity on the next trip having found that this harbor was the safest and deepest on the Atlantic coast. She will draw about 27 feet when loaded to the deck and she will then be able to float at low tide at the coal docks with plenty of space to spare. Now that the steam diggers are at work, she will have a chance to see some of the big tramp steamers here with cargoes.

Funeral Services

The funeral services over the remains of the late Luther E. Martin were held at the Court street Christian church this afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. Myron Tyler, pastor of the church officiated and read the burial service. The church was well filled with relatives and friends of the deceased who testified to their love and devotion to him by many beautiful floral tributes. A delegation from Osgood Lodge I. O. O. F., of which deceased was a member, acted as pall bearers.
